ADDENDUM I

COMPARISON OF DDS&T SURVEY RESULTS
WITH AGENCY-WIDE SURVEY RESULTS
(SUMMER 1976)

1. (U) Survey data were computer processed using a statistical package program. An estimate was obtained on the level of significance of differences in employee responses by selected demographic groups. In this addendum, reference is made to the test of significance which established whether the observed difference in responses among the five career services was of such a magnitude that it could not be attributed to chance factors. No reference is made to survey questions where differences in employee responses according to career service affiliation had comparatively little statistical significance. Neither is an effort made here to offer an analysis or explanation as to why significant differences exist in employee responses among the career services to these survey questions.
2. (U) All Agency staff employees responding to a question make up the total sample which serves as the reference (norm). The norm in this instance refers to the mean (average) percentage of all respondents answering "yes" to a given survey question without regard for their background characteristics such as career service, age, education, etc.
3. (U) The percentage of "yes" answers by employees of the DDS&T to each questionnaire items is converted into a standard score which reflects the relative deviation of the DDS&T Career Service percentage figure from the Agency mean percentage figure based on a normal distribution. This standard score is converted to a centile to establish the point in the distribution above which and below which any given percent of cases falls. The centile depicts the Career Service's relative position in the Agency with respect to the item in question. For example, a DDS&T Career Service centile score of 75 indicates that in only 25 times out of 100 would Agency employees at large respond more positively, i.e., with more 'yeses' to the question, than DDS&T Careerists. In this regard it should be noted that in certain instances a low centile score is the more preferred position. To illustrate, consider the question "Do higher level employees do too much lower level work": a career service centile score of 10 would indicate that in marked contrast to the opinion of Agency employees at large, employees in that career service believe higher level employees do not do too much lower level work, i.e., significantly fewer employees in that career service answered 'yes' to the question.

4. (U) It should be remembered that actual measured differences in mid-centile range, 40-60 for example, are not as great as the actual measured differences of the centile ranges 1 to 21 and 79 to 99, because frequencies are much greater in the center of a normal distribution than they are at the extremes. The following guide is provided for interpreting centile information:

Centile	1-15 (significantly below the average response)
"	15-30 (borderline)
	30-70 (typical or average response)
	70-85 (borderline)
	85-99 (significantly above the average response)

5. (C) Before addressing individual survey questionnaire items per se, an evaluation of the overall success that DDS&T respondents feel the Agency has had in implementing or managing personnel programs should be noted. This evaluation, of course, is from the employees' perspective and is not intended to imply findings based on hard data nor a complete personnel management evaluation effort.
